TEACHERS' TRAINING PROGRAM

a Green Campus Programme initiative

About the Program

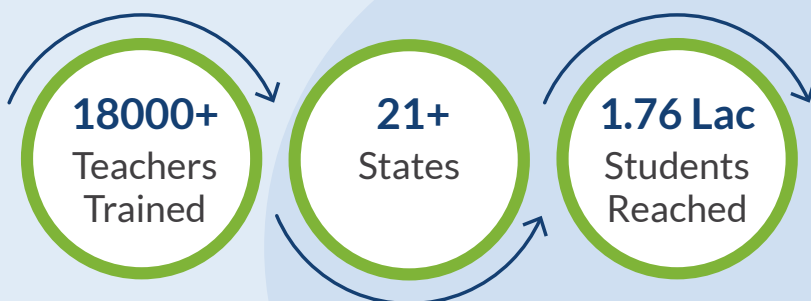

The Teachers' Training Program is one of the oldest initiatives of The Climate Project Foundation. It is a program devised for the teachers aiming at a comprehensive approach to equip them with the knowledge, skills, and tools necessary to inculcate sustainability practices in their campuses.

Since 2009, we have trained 18000+ teachers across 21 states. Through these training workshops, the teachers developed a multifaceted approach to education, they integrated sustainability into diverse subjects, fostering interconnectedness and imparted a comprehensive understanding among students. Teachers trained by our industry experts gain unique learnings beyond traditional pedagogical approaches.

The Teachers' Training Program, part of the Green Campus Programme, features customizable week-long modules where all teachers participate in comprehensive online or offline training. This training covers various domains such as energy, waste, water, biodiversity, air, climate innovation, and community outreach.
